LONDON, June 12—The wires from Sofia have been silent for the past garian people will have a full and 24 hours, and the only new development lies in the mystery as to Alexander Stamboulisky's fate. The information via Vienna that he has been captured must be accepted with reserve, but if correct, the military bourgeois regime ought to succeed in consolidating its position. If, however, the one-time Premier is still at large, anything may happen. PARIS, June 12-With the inability of the British Cabinet to agree to the French demand for the cessation of French demand for the cessation of Germany's passive resistance in the Ruhr before any progress whatever can be made, there is being revived as a compromise the suggestion of an armistice already described by The Christian Science Monitor representative. Several Points of Disagreement

The inability of the British to sign a simple, common reply, calling on Germany to surrender, leaves matters worse than they were before. Even now, however, it is hoped that a final effort will be made during the day to reach an accord.

As the British proposals stand, they are utterly opposed by the French, the things not mentioned in the report and the only failure to agree is not on the question of a summons to Ger many. Its resistance produces a painful impression, but the placing of the Bonar Law plan in the forefront of subsequent discussions is regarded as impossible. Indeed, the whole idea of discussion is rejected by the French. The worst of all is the suggestion that a conference of experts should be held to inquire into the total that Germany can pay, and also to inquire into the problem of interallied debts, and that of French security.

Announcement of a gift of $100,000 for construction of a new dormitory at the Massachuseits Institute of Technology was made at the fifty-fifth graduation exercises, held this morning, when 718 degrees were conferred. The gift is offered by the class of 1893, returning to celebrate its thirtieth anniversary, and is contingent on an early start in the construction of an early start in the construction of an early start in the construction of the new building. At present only a small part of the Institute's students are accommodated in college quariers.

Two women were among those who received degrees this morning. Six men were granted the degree of Doctor of Philosophy; four that of Doctor of Science; seven that of Master in Architecture, and 156 were made Masters of Science. In all, 173 graduate degrees were given, while 545 received the degree of Bachelor of Science.

The exercises were held in the great court before the main entrance to the Institute buildings. It was the first graduation at Technology in which the in many years that the degrees were awarded in person.

The esentors, preceeded by the members of the faculty, who were also in academic costume, marched from different points along the buildings and formed into one column just before taking their seats before the speakers' platform. The Coast Artillery Band played. The exercises were beginn with an invocation by the Rt. Rev. Charles E. Slattery, Episcopal Bishop coadjutor of Massachusetts.

Two Addresses

The exercises were simple but impressive. Addresses were beinged with the class of 1892, and Maj.-Gen. Andre W. Brewster, commanding the first corps area.

The message of Mr. Lee was that engineers should take a greater in the degree to take an interest in the creation politics; in fact, he said, as received to take an interest in the creation of the secondary of the fact, he are also take an interest in the creation politics; in fact, he said the said of the first time of th

Finally, in urging the Technology graduates to take an interest in the political life of the country, he added: "Our country was founded as a representative republic. That is a form of government under which it is supposed that the ablest, wisest and best citizens will be chosen by the votes of their fellows to make and administer the country's laws and conduct its public affairs. If we fall short of that ideal it is breause those who have the greatest intelligence and best-trained minds too often leave the entire fate of politics in the hands of those elements of society which are the least fitted for the functions of citizenship."

Then the oath of office was administered to Mhj. R. T. Pendleton to those members of the graduation class who had completed the reserve officers' training course and had received commissions as second lieutenants together with their degrees.

Then followed the presentation of degrees by the president, Samuel W. Stratton, who was inducted into office with alaborate coremonies vesterday. with elaborate ceremonies yesterday It was the first time since the number of Technology graduates began to reach the hundreds that the diplomas were given out individually. Another innovation was the omission of thesis abstracts. It had been the custom, ever since theses were required of graduates at Technology, to read abstracts from some of them. The division of degrees this year shows the extent to which the Institute is tending to become a graduate institution. Almost 25 per cent of the number of diplomas awarded were for the completion of work of a higher character—the highest percentage in the history of the Institute.

Engineering Administration

As was the case last year, the course in engineering administration, which includes business training, was by far the most popular course. Then followed mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, chemical engineering.

Three recipients of degrees attracted a great deal of attention and were given hearty applause as they stepped to the platform. These were the two young women, Helen Shannon Miller of Brookline, Mass., and Anna Augusta Mohring of Lancaster, Penn. and Theodore Miller Edison, son of Thomas A. Edison. Mr. and Mrs. Edison were present.

Ease of Transportation

"But there is a far more important reason than that," Mr. Edison continued. "The amount of power that can be delivered at a given place as hauled in bulky coal-loads by freight cars is no greater than that which can be sent through a single wire instantly. The place where the power is produced may be many miles from the arrives there without loading or unloading of cars, waste of time, or coal consumption in engine haulage. These are the reasons why the American railroads of the future will draw their energy from dynamos, not from locomotives.

"Look at the strider that the coal mine.

The change has been imposed by the fact that nearly all countries of time again, Mr. Tod is guoted as saying, his decisions have been set aside by appeals to the Commissioner-General's office and to the White House.

Aliens who had not the slightest hope of entering the country were encouraged to come and take a chance that either "cooked-up stories of distress" or political interference would get them through, Mr. Tod charges. Executive Committee Adopts Resolution Declaring New
Electoral Law Unacceptable

By Special Cable
ROME, June 12—The executive committee of the Popular Party, under the chairmanship of Don Sturzo, has unanimously adopted a resolution, declaring the draft of the new electoral law, unacceptable and intrusting the parliamentary group to defend proportional representation when the Chamber of Deputtes discusses the reform.

Thus, Don Sturzo openly challenges Benito Mussolini, the Premier, and the Popular Party passes officially to the Opposition.

Third, the British Cabinet believes it could persuade the Reich to accept the figures of the Bonar Law plan proposed last January;

Fourth, if France is unwilling to change its point of view, Great Britain suggests that Allied experts fix the amount of German reparations after investigating conditions in Germany;

Fifth, if these experts reach an agreement, Great Britain would then demand that Germany cease passive resistance. Second, Interallied discussion is possible to the Bonar Law plan proposed last January;

The Populars' opposition is natural, as with the new system they would lose half their seats in the next Parliament.

The new electoral law, as introduced by Signor Mussolini a few days ago maintains the number of deputies as at present, but the whole is turned into one huge constituency. The method of election is that each party submits a list of candidates, the list which obtains the majority of the votes takes two-thirds of the seats in the Chamber of Deputies, the minority list being divided between the other

This insures the Government of the day always having a working majority without having to coalesce with any of the other parties in the chamber.

City Beautiful Supporters Win Fight to Keep Trolleys From Court Square

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 12 (Special)-"City Beautiful" gained a victory last night, when the removal of all trolley lines from Court Square became assured by a vote of the Board of Aldermen. A tie vote registered the defeat of a plan to establish a loop about Court Square extension, for running cars to and from Hampden County Memorial Bridge, and cleared the way for the alternative plan of a Pynchon Street loop, recommended by

This decision means that the tracks now in use on the old part of the square will be removed and that the esthetic values of the civic center will be sustained, according to the will of leading citizens who subscribed funds to enlarge the square.

This action followed an awakening of public sentiment that brought an

Café de Novedades, Landmark of Old Seville, Disappears

Many a Famous Andalusian Singer and Dancer First Won Success There

Seville, Spain Special Correspondence NE of the most Sevillian of all Sevillian things has just disappeared, and it will be missed by all foreign visitors who have ever attempted to see below the new and modern surface of life in the sparkling capital of Andalusia. This is to say that the Café de Novedades is no more. It has been burnt out in strange circumstances. Almost all Seville, as it is put, watched the flames consume this historic house, and were sad at

Not only the foreigners will miss it, but the country people of moderate means, the agricultural community who came to Seville now and then to dispose of their productions and make their purchases. To them a visit to the Café de Novedades represented an evening at the very heart of all artistic pleasure. There was no other place at all like it in the whole of Spain, and it had traditions of a kind that in their own way, as some insist, might compare with those of the Tea-

The Whitewashed Front

The Café de Novedades was situated at the far end of the famous and popular Calle de Sierpes, the characteristic main street of the old kind in the city, just at the point where it bends around to the right and gives way to the Calle de Santa Maria de Gracia. The exterior was of the most unpretentious kind, and only those who know what they were setting out to find discovered it. The small front was plainly whitewashed with just a did, and maintained itself as a valualamp over a large double door which | ble property was one of the mysteries had more of the appearance of the of a land of mysteries. entrance to a stable or a warehouse than to that of a place of amusement in the very center of Seville. Noname of the place ever appeared on the outside. Printed placards were years ago word was given out that often posted on the right-hand side of the Café de Novedades had been placed the door, but, such is the quixotic on the municipality's list for destruccharacter of things in these parts, they referred more frequently than otherwise to announcements of the welcomed and treated with every courtesy. Inside was a lofty and rather gloomy hall, with big columns and compartmented galleries. The place had not been painted or decorated for a long time, and its gilt and colors were very much the worse for years—but to the frequenters very much the better, perhaps, for they always felt much at home in the old place just as it was. The whole of the floor space was covered with small tables and chairs at which the main part of the audience sat at their ease, usually consuming light refreshment. Andalusian Entertainment

On a small, but ordinary kind of stage an Andalusian variety entertainment was presented. Here was given thoroughly characteristic Andalusian singing and dancing. The soloist and the guitar accompanist would come forward, seated side by side on two small chairs, and as the strings of the instrument were twanged, the other after long and impressive silence, would from time to time break forth into curious melodies in the Andalusian way-somewhat mournful melodies foreign visitors often regarded them. Occasionally, a chorus would assist the singing of the "coplas." The entertainment was always clean, and in the past some of the finest Spanish dancers and singers have made their beginnings and achieved their first success at this historic house. Free as it was for admission, and merely nominally as the artistes were necessarily paid, it had great traditions in this respect. How it succeeded as it

Tennyson and his wife suffered occasionally from the Thames floods; on one occasion they were driven out of house and home; but on the whole they found Chapel House a pleasant enough retreat. In the little garden the poet often read aloud to his wife. His son, Hallam, the present Lord Tennyson, was born at Chapel Houseon Aug. 11, 1852, and the happy father immediately dispatched a letter to Elizabeth Barrett-Browning to tell her of the great event. ### Co-ordination of Transportation Systems an Important Issue in the United States dustrious in trying to formulate a plan for co-ordinating transportation by highways with that of the railways.

The Motor Industry .

The number of motor vehicles in the United States is enormous, espe-cially when compared with the rest of the world. The growth during the last 10 years is almost unbelievable.

This country has more than 83 per cent of the automotive transportation of the world. The United States Bureau of Public Roads estimates that in 1911 there were 501,000 motor vehicles here, of which number only 14,000 were trucks. The registrations for 1922 were 12,364,377, of which 12 per cent, or approximately 1,500,000, were trucks. In all the rest of the world there are only 2,380,000 motor vehicles in use. The United States

The automotive industry is manufac

Probably the issues will be more com-plicated than that, but it is unquestioned that transportation will play an important part in the election of 1924. Already the radical bloc in Congress has made railroads the target for its heaviest guns.

Happily, in calling attention to the importance of this issue, Mr. Hoover did not confine himself to railroad transportation. To him the problem consists of linking up waterways, highways and railways into a coordinated transportation system which will best serve the needs of the American people and in that fashion he has presented it to the business men. Each of these three forms of carriage has its own peculiar func-tions, and if they have become competitive, it is for lack of a scheme of co-ordination. Mr. Hoover thinks that unless the transportation problem is speedily solved so as to provide adequate service for shippers, it will be only a short time before the railroads will pass to Government ownership and operation, a possibility which he

Effort to Solve Problem

Responding to the warning issued by the Secretary of Commerce, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States became the sponsor of an effort to solve the problem of co-ordination and to construct a plan of in 1922 the output was 2,334,000 transportation. To that end railroads, passenger cars and 243,000 trucks. water carriers, and the automotive industry were invited to send delegates to a conference which also included manufacturers, merchants, farmers, economists, and publicists. The purpose of the conference was to conduct the necessary research and to produce a plan to be submitted to the country with the backing of these The initial meetpowerful interests. ing was held last March and the conference resolved itself into several committees, each with a separate func-The various headings under which those committees are working are as follows: Government relations, railroad consolidation, readjustment of relative freight schedules, relation of highway and motor transportation to other transportation agencies, development of waterways, and co-ordination of rail and waterway service. None of these committees has com-pleted its task but recent reports from ome of them indicate that progress is being made.

The total one of encouragement, for experience amount used for highway construction and maintenance between 1910 and 1921 was $2,526,000,000. Co-operation Planned

That viewpoint, however, does not appeal to the majority of railroad managers, who believe that it will strain their energies to develop their own branch of the transportation service without undertaking to manage the complexities of motor transport, which even today has a volume of freight traffic equal to 50 per cent of that of the railroads, and a far greater volume of passenger traffic. Also the difficulties of securing a monopoly of highway transportation are almost insuperable. Most railroad men are content, therefore, to leave it in individual hands under the general guidance of the automotive industry. Moreover, the automotive industry is exceedingly friendly to the railroads. Not only is that industry one of the largest users of railroad transporta-

Saving of 158,000,000 Tons of Coal a Year Possible, Says Official

BETHLEHEM, Pa., June 12 (A)-A saving of 158,000,000 tons of coal annually is possible by utilization of the power now going to waste in the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers, William S. Murray, chairman of the Super Power Survey Commission of the United States Geological Survey, declared in an address at the fifty-fifth commencement of Lehigh University, the produced a new column and the commencement of Lehigh University. sity here today. He pictured a new electrical era in which power will be distributed to public utilities through great central companies.

"Over 9,000,000 horsepower in the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers serves now only to raise the temperature of those mighty streams as molecules of their waters bump against each other in their rush from the Great Lakes to the sea," he said. 'The year has 8760 hours and as the flow of these waters is practically constant, this means that when a year has passed, the possible useful work of approximately 79,000,000,000 horsepower hours have passed with it.
Then year follows year.

"Ther year follows year.

"The average fuel consumption of the electric utilities within the superpower zone during 1919 was 2.76 pounds per kilowat hour. If we were to include the coal rate for the railroads and the industries, this would be the coal rate for the railroads and the industries, this would be the coal rate for the railroads and the industries, this would be the coal rate for the railroads and the industries, this would be the coal rate for the railroads and the industries of the state's government and possibilities for improvements. What then do these 79,000,000,000 horsepower hours running to waste represent? One hundred and fifty-eight million tons of coal annually!"

Fifty million tons of coal could be saved each year in the so-called superpower zone, comprising the territory between Boston and Washington, and inland from the coast 150 miles, Mr. Murray declared, if electric utilities within the zone met future load re-quirements by extending their power facilities jointly by constructing large hydroelectric and steam-electric plants. This also would save the electric utilities over $230,000,000.

COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE PLANS AT PRESENT DEADLOCKED

Part of Chapter in Forthcoming Book by Asa Matthieu Uncovers Aggressive Medical Activities

part of a chapter of a forthcoming book by Asa Matthien, which we covers the situation as it exists in the United States regarding propaganda and legislative bills to pronote state medicine and similar autocratic measures.

In this article the subject of compulsory health insurance is discussed, and Mr. Matthieu shores by excerpts from uddresses by medical practitioners that the opinion on this subject, even among the doc tors, is very far from being undni-mous in its favor. Arguments of medical proponents and opponents are presented, and the political ac-tivity of the American Medical Association is exposed in its efforts to force acceptance of this measure. The articles are not written in the least as an attack on any individual members of the medical profession, but purely as an exposure of aggressive medical activities.

The subject of health insurance for wage earners and their families has agitated the medical profession in the United States since 1915. Bills to make the proposed system compulsory and revolutionize the practice of modicine in America have occupied the attention of a number of state legislatures since 1916. Public funds have been appropriated and commissions appointed to study compulsory health insurance and report. The scheme, however, appears at present to be deadlocked because of mixed

Proponents of health insurance have declared repeatedly that the economic loss due to illness is so great and urgent that state aid is required to offset it.

Opponents of health insurance assert emphatically that the proposed system would be the entering wedge for "state medicine"—a rather indefi-nite term, but one which is generally accepted to mean that the practice of medicine should be under the control. direction or subsidy of the state or national government.

Although many physicians occupy ing positions of control and influence medical organizations and public health departments are the principal advocates of a compulsory health surance system, it is apparent that the rank and file of the medical profession are unalterably opposed to any system of compulsion whereby the average physician would become merely a cog in a great medical

Health Insurance Commission

In 1917, bills to establish state insurance were introduced in 21 legislatures. These measures were almost identical to Health Insurance Bill No. 236, introduced in the New York Legislature in January, 1916, by Senator Ogden L. Mills, and which provided, among other alleged "benefits," the following: Medical, surgical and nursing attendance; medical service by individual physician or through institutions; medical and surgical supplies, including eyeglasses and "with which carriers have ments"; cash benefit; funeral benefit.

This article is the second of a ling of three members to carry out the eries on "Medical Politics," being act and to adopt all reasonable rules art of a chapter of a forthcoming and regulations. Public inspection of information acquired by the commission from employers and employees was prohibited. The cost to the people of the New York State alone for health insurance, based upon bills introduced, has been estimated at $250,-000,000 annually. Multiply that great sum by 48 and see what a "gold mine" this would be for the politicians and > Independent doctors in opposing this ambitious program have declared re-peatedly that it has not been proved that the economic loss from sickness is so great, embarrassing, or urgent that an elaborate and costly system of state aid is required to offset it. In condemning this form of compulsor; medical service, they assert that "every physician knows that the major por tion of his time is spent in caring for patients whose illness is short-lived and does not incapacitate for work for

The attitude of the general medical practitioner toward compulsory health social insurance committee of the insurance was indicated by George L. American Medical Association, dealt Apfelbach, A. B., M. D., of Chicago, in with: (1) The quantitative aspects of a paper read before the Michigan State service to be rendered; (2) organiza-Medical Society at its annual meeting tion of medical aid; (3) the method Medical Society at its annual meeting to represent our interests tell us that compulsory health insurance is in-evitable, that the representative men in the profession approve of it. Now, one, am not convinced that this is the general sentiment of the medical profession, even if the litera-ture issued by the American Medical Association has been strongly advocating the adoption of this scheme It is a matter that should, in my opinion, be decided by the practitioners, who are fully conscious of the delicate relations which exist between patient and physician, and not by a body of men who have had either no, or but little, experience in the practice of medicine, and are too easily misled by the arguments of propagandists. By adopting health insurance, we are completely changing the policy of our profession as over against the public. profession as over against the public.

The enlightenment which has followed from the discussion of this question in our local societies, in spite of the literature of the American Medical Association on this subject, has prompted the house of delegates,

The action of the house of delegates of the American Medical Association, referred to by Dr. Apfelbach, is contained in the following resolution passed April 27, 1920, at the annual meeting of the association, held at New Orleans:

Resolved that the American Medical Association declares its opposicai Association declares its opposi-tion to the institution of any plan em-bodying the system of compulsory contributory insurance against ill-ness, or any other plan of compul-sory insurance which provides for medical service to be rendered con-tributors, or their dependents pro-vided, controlled, or regulated by any state, or the Federal Government. state, or the Federal Government.

The chief argument of medical proponents of health insurance is based upon the assertion that a national emergency exists as regards the ade quate health protection of the people or sanatorium and that the proposed system would made satisfactory financial arrange- to all wage earners, their wives and make complete medical care available children, and protect all wage earners. The cost of this service was to be including those who would otherwise borne by employer, employee, and the lack the means or foresight to insure.

To the Editor of The Christian Science
Monitor:

The editorials "Religion and the Twelve-Hour Day" and "Cheap Steel and Tortured Men." appearing in the Monitor of May 26 and May 28, respectively, are excellent. They state clearly an issue of vital import to the progress of the human race.

As the leaven of Truth permeates more and more fully the body of our economic life, two conditions stand out in clearer and clearer relief as requiring correction before any considerable growth can reasonably be expected from the great masses of mankind toward a discernment of the spiritual order of life, the apprehension and demonstration of which is the goal—often unrecognized—of all human progress.

These two evil conditions are: First, the overburden of physical toil, a mill-stone that all but submerges millions of men, women, and children in the sea of materialism; second, the consuming fear of poverty, that hangs like a pall over the minds and lives of multifudes. These are shackles that multitudes. These are shackles that enlightened consciousness must rend asunder.

Both are the outgrowth of avarice, tyranny, and ignorance. Both can and will be destroyed through impartial honesty, education, and love. It is gratifying to note the Monitor's constructive efforts to hasten the ultimate victory.

Denver's Music Week

To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor:

The editorial reference to Denver's Music Week printed in your issue of May 26 indicates a misunderstanding of the character of that event.

First of all, Denver did not "endure" her music week; she "enjoyed" it.

Wouldn't many American cities be glad to "endure" a fine performance of the oratorio "Elijah': an excellent concert by a symphony orchastra of 90 musicians; four performances of a popular opera produced with professional excellence; an evening of high-class asthetic dancing; a concert of choral music by 3000 well-trained school children (to mention only the more prominent "major' events of our more prominent "major' events of our

Modern wonders of air travel and air communication came into play the other day when Sir Samuel Hoare, the Air Minister, was returning to London from Cologne by the Instone air liner City of New York. He left Cologne at 3:15 in the afternoon, not knowing who was going to be Prime Minister in place of Mr. Bonar Law, resigned, and before he landed at Croydon less than four hours later he had been notified by wireless telephone of the appointment of Stanley Baldwin. ### IMPROVEMENT MARKS GENERAL FOOTWEAR TRADE

Belated New Business Appears, With Special Demand for the Summer Types

There is a steadily improving tone in the leading wholesale shoe markets. New business, although late in beginning, is of fair volume and the call for summer footwear continues active. Manufacturers specializing in such their wants. Fine selected colors are their wants. Fine selected color figure prominently during the coming summer, inquiries are common concerning just what will feature. However, although the keenest creators of fashionable footwear cannot completely forsee the future, it is conceded that black suede, black satin, and patent leather will be conspicuous in ladies' oxfords, and strap pumps during the next fall and winter.

Staple goods are slow in movement. Activity varies as the traders swing toward lines offering the greatest in-ducements, and such favors do not always fall to the larger manufacturers. Some of the western plants have felt the restricted demand for wear are comparatively low, the Bosfon market's offerings being especially prepared to induce trade from the large number of shoe buyers expected in that city during July.

Of course, the established lists are subject to conditions that are likely to arise in the leather markets; also to the arbitrary demands of Labor, but aside from the Brockton (Mass.) strike, there is little to disturb the cost price apparent in shoe materials. Still the trend, if anything, is toward fractional advances.

Leather Market Affairs

Union sole leather tanners report a greater mid-season quietness than usual, although traders are in the market formulating plans for cutting, stores will be opened include Alabama, which begins in July. The slight drop in hide prices last week had a tightening effect on buyers. Sales of any importance were held up. Prices are unchanged, however. Union offal is also dull. Fair-sized sales of light bellies at 22 cents have been booked in Boston, and Philadelphia and Chicago tanners have had some business for shoulders at 3 cents, and heads at 12 cents.

The Boston oak leather market There is not enough doing t get anything reliable regarding price New York and Chicago dealers giv similar reports, but prices hold firm although what a big operator migh do is another question. Quotati

Boston being the largest offal mar-ket in the United States its conditions are a fair criterion from which to judge. Car load lots are few, therefore, former rates prevail. Chicago dealers are selling a fair amount o heavy shoulders and bellies, but the lighter sort moves slowly.

The Boston side upper leather market is feeling the effects of the Brock ton (Mass.) strike. Business bein done in other near-by markets i hardly enough to prevent a surplus o stock. It might seem that such protracted condition of duliness would weaken quotations, but prices for th top and middle grades are very strong The only concessions reported are i the lower selections. New York wit prices unchanged, is doing little whil Chicago dealers are having a stead; demand for just enough to satisfy re quirements. A large buyer, for instance, was in the Boston market looking for black light weight side leather having a suede finish. His bids were low, but the quantity wanted

Calf and Patent Leather

Calf skins have moved slowly for the last two weeks. Buyers have been taking no more than actual needs de manded. All the better grades, regardless of their finishes, are strong in price, but the under selections are offered at prices commensurate with prevailing circumstances. Boston tan-ners are booking small orders for fancy tannages. The ladies' novelty shoe demand continues, and fancy leathers are carried along with it.

York, Chicago and Boston is good and in a measure proves the truthfulness of its predicted prestige this coming fall. All signs point to an active call for high-grade fancy leathers at high Patent leather tanners are getting only a small amount of new business. Shipping on old orders continues, and fair amounts are on foreign account. However, the future is a bit brighter since the tanners learned that shiny leather has been decreed as fashion able for the rest of the year.

Philadelphia dealers report a fair local call for the middle and lower

Cabretta-Glazed Kid

Cabretta-Glazed Kid

There is a marked improvement in the call for cabretta, glazed finished, the top grades having proved worthy, are now moving well at 50@40 cents. The lower grades, however, still find glazed kid a hindrance.

Boston glazed kid tanners report a better call for grades running from the medium to the choicer selections. High colors receive the most attention. Blacks are slow of sale.

Both Philadelphia and Boston dealers report large buyers offering big orders, but at figures impossible to meet. Colors form the major part of their wants. Fine selected colors are still selling, although closer to actual needs than a month ago.

To sum up the conditions, colored glazed kid is moving daily, but blacks are quiet. All prices remain steady at last previous quotations.

William H. Bremner

66T IKE father, like son," as the old saying goes, applies with special force to William Hepburn Bremner of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad. Mr. Bremner is a man of two professions. He graduated from the University of Iowa in 1891 with the degree of C. E. and in 1895 with the degree of LL. D. Although possess ing an engineering degree, most of his professional career has been devoted to the practice of law. As a man of two professions he is following in his father's footsteps. The elder Mr. Bremner was both an engineer and

W. H. Bremner was reared at Marshalltown, Ia. His first railway experience was as clerk in the general offices of the Iowa Central, now a part of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, at Marshalltown. While studying engineering he spent the summer vacation of 1889 assisting in the survey of the Burlington extension from Old Monroe, Mo., to St. Louis. He worked two years in the engineering department of the Burlington.

After his graduation from the law college in 1895 he practiced law at Des Moines, Ia. In 1902 he was made city solicitor, holding that position for six years. He entered the service of the Minneapolis & St. Louis July 1, 1909, as general attorney, and was promoted to general solicitor

In 1916, when the office of general counsel was re-established, he was appointed to that office. In April, 1917, he was appointed acting president, and was elected president in May, 1917. He is a member of the Minneapolis Athletic Club, the University Club, and the Presbyterian Church.

AID FOR EUROPE United States Spends $3,000,-000,000 Abroad for Merchandise

BIG IMPORTS MEAN

NEW YORK, June 12—The pert of New York and other ports of entry throughout the United States are today flooded with foreign merchandise, upon which the United States Treasury will collect this fiscal year approximately $550,000,000 in custom receipts, Frederick J. H. Kracke, United States appraiser, told the Civitan Club today. This is the largest sum ever collected by the Federal Government, he said, and indicates that the pros-perity of the United States is not only nation-wide, but it is being shared by the whole world.

Billions Involved

"The biggest and most profitable business of the United States Govern-ment today," Mr. Kracke said, "is the examination and appraising of the vast quantities of foreign merchandise coming into this country from all parts of the world. In fact the quantity of imports exceeds that of any other year although the actual money value is lower than the peak year 1920. During the present fiscal year this country will import close to $3,000,000,000 in raw materials and finished goods. This means that Americans have spent $3,000,600,000 in foreign countries which I venture to say is the greatest act of economic reconstruction performed by any one country since the

"Our imports today are exceeding our exports. When this announce-ment was made recently by the De-partment of Commerce the Nation was astounded. Eight months ago it was predicted that the present tariff act would destroy our imports. As a mat-ter of fact and record today this one act not only brought prosperity to the entire country but our nation-wide prosperity and nation-wide demand for been so great that foreign manufac-turers and producers have been able to share with the people of this country the period of industrial and comnercial prosperity.

Spells Aid For Europe

"This is the biggest single contribution of the United States to world normalcy since the armistice. The fact that we are today consuming larger quantities of foreign goods than ever in our history means that the mills, mines, and factories of foreign nations are busy because we, in this country,

'It shows that our prosperity cannot be isolated; that the United States commercially is not isolated and that this country, by its purchases abroad is laying the foundation for an era of international prosperity which only international political uncertainties can

ALLIS-CHALMERS CO. HEAD SAYS ORDERS ARE BEING REFUSED

NEW YORK, June 12—President O. H. Fulk of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, returning after four months in Europe, says: "Allis-Chalmers is operating 75 per cent of capacity, but this is due to labor conditions, not to lack of business. We are turning down orders, as we don't propose to increase labor costs, because that would cause the price of our product to rise all over the country. Consequently, we are only producing our maximum with the labor at hand.

"Nearly all Europe hard pressed for raw material. A number of large machinery plants in Europe have been closed recently because of this, and conditions in our line will not improve until the Rubr situation is settled.

FLOWERS in WINTER

The time is at hand to plan out what bulbs you will plant in your bowls, pots or boxes to flower at Christmas and early Spring. Winter would indeed be dull without the brightness, beauty and fragrance of the Single White Roman Hyacinth, the Freesia, Miniature (Cynthella) Hyacinth, Paper White Poly Narcissus, and others. New catalogue of all Bulbs for Winter and Spring flowering in the rooms and out in the garden is being prepared. Ready shortly, garden is being prepared. Ready shortly, and, quite free. We would appreciate the opportunity to post a copy to everyone with an interest in the best.

It is also worthy of note that Canada's purchases from the United States were $14,000,000 more than they were during April of last year, while those of the United King-dom were $14,000,000 less.

Early favorable western crop condi-tions are making business leaders generally confident of good business for

The strong demand for wheat in other countries is another reassuring factor. The International Institute of Agriculture reports that 23 European countries, having a prospective yield of 23,000,000 tons of wheat, will re-quire 43,000,000 tons, so that even with reduced buying power the demand from Europe is bound to be good. In addition, the latest reports from the United States indicate that grain crops will hardly be as large as they

General Ontlook Favorable In any event eastern Canada and British Columbia are certain to have a very good year, for the activity in mining, lumbering, the pulp and paper industry, and in hydroelectric development assures that. There is no doubt that the leaders in the pulp and paper industry are prepared for big developments.

this connection one might refer to the completion of the reorganization of the Belgo-Canadian Paper Company, which under the presidency of Hubert Biermans, includes with Sir Herbert Holt, some of the leading figures in Canadian business. An offering of $8,000,000 6 per cent 20-year bonds has been fully taken up, a large portion of them in the United

Paper Combine Looked For

Despite denials, it is well known that Laureptide and St. Maurice paper interests have been talking over the subject of a merger. There is an impression that if these two get together, Belgo and Wayagamack may follow; all four, because of their loca tion, have much in common.

Another paper flotation likely soon Another paper notation likely soon to make its appearance is that for the Manitoba Pulp & Paper Company, the head of which, J. D. Moarthur, the well-known railway contractor, has recently been in Montreal carrying on negotiations. It is understood that plans call for the issue of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 of bonds and same amount of preferred stock.

Important developments are also expected in connection with the announcement of a change in the name of the Public Service Corporation to that of the Quebec Power Company, and the increase in its capitalization from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Prominent American and British capitalists, including J. E. Aldred, Lord Maidstone and J. B. Chase of Boston, have been inspecting the properties of this and other Quebec corporations, which is deemed to forehadow a further considerable capital investment therein.

Another announcement of very great importance in international finance is that of the merging of the Canadian Corporation of the National City Company with that of the United Finance Corporation of Montreal, which is now to be known as the National City Com-

As is well known, these subsidiaries of large American financial corpora-tions have brought a great deal of capital to this country during the last few years. It was no doubt felt that a merging of interests would enable them to handle to even better prises that are beginning to loom on

It is doubtful whether a stronger or more representative group of men have ever been gathered together in a directorate in Canada than is to be found in this one, which includes Lord Shaughnessy, Sir Charles Gordon, Sir Augustus Nanton, E. L. Pease of the Royal Bank, and a number of others. The new corporation will have branches in the leading cities of the Dominion, and the representative character of its directorate is an assurance that its investments will be well placed.

The Province of Saskatchewan has sold an issue of $3,155,000 20-year 5 per cent bonds to Aemilius Jarvis & Co. and an American syndicate, the price being $5.05. The money will cost the Province 5.465 in New York.

RUTLAND ROAD'S SURPLUS LARGER

The Rutland Railroad Company reports for the year ended Dec. 31, 1922, a surplus after charges of $153,036 compared with a surplus of $13,326 in the previous year.

The income account shows these changes:

1922 Increase

Freight revenue was $3,167,577, a decrease of $65,122. Tons of freight carried in 1922 were 1,828,219, a decrease of 111,439. Tonnage of anthracite and bituminous coal fell off sub-stantially due to strike conditions; tonnage of pulp wood showed a marked decrease and there were also decreases in lesser degree in certain other commodities. Partly offsetting these were tonnage increases distrib-uted among a number of the classes of freight hauled, notably in automobiles and automobile trucks.

"Passenger revenue was $1,477,880, a decrease of $77,061. The number of passengers carried was 1,138,487, a decrease of 101,137. The falling off largely in local traffic."

PIG IRON PRICES LOWER BUT BUYING

MOVEMENT ABSENT NEW YORK, June 12-Prices for pig iron have shown a weakening tendency in the last week. Among orders seported placed was one for 20,000 by the Lukens Steel Company at a price equal to about $25 Birming-ham, a decline of $2 from quotations from that center. It was expected this would stimulate inquiry, but no marked increase among buyers has yet become evident.

Other tonnages booked were mostly for small amounts for early delivery, indicating buyers feel prices have not yet reached bottom. On the other hand, most producers have orders for two months and are not troubled. It is not unlikely that some smaller furnaces may be forced to suspend, as BETTER WEATHER they cannot operate profitably at pres-enf prices. A healthy sign is that despite record production for several months there is no piling up of stocks, all material produced apparently going into immediate consump-

While prices may go lower, and some local dealers think they will, the ultimate outcome must be a renewed buying movement soon and a consequent turn for the better.

COTTON IN TEXAS GETS LATE START

Indications Are That Much of Early-Planted Acreage Will Be Abandoned

GALVESTON, Tex., June 9 (Special Correspondence)-Cotton in Texas is getting a late start, due to unusually getting a late start, due to unusually cool weather, and reports indicate heavy destruction by pests that thrive during cool weather.

Although the acreage planted to cotton is larger than has been planted in this State for several years, present indications are that much of the early planted acreage will be abandoned, and it is possible that the total crop will be smaller than the average for the last few years, if not as small as last year. The outlook at this time is declared by men well informed as the conditions throughout the cotton-growing part of the State to be decidedly unfavorable. cidedly unfavorable.

Cotton in South Texas and along the coast has been especially hard hit This is the third disaster that has overtaken the South Texas cotto growers. The lack of labor is als being reflected in the poorly cultivated fields, and many farmers are in vated fields, and many farmers are in clined to abandon their crops, rathe than attempt to cultivate them.

The outlook for the cotton crop in West Texas is some better, but is far from indicating a bumper crop Planting in West Texas is always three of four weeks later than in South Texas and the country the contract of the country the country and the country the country that the country the country the country the country the country the country that the country the country the country the country the country that the co South Texas, and for this reason the West, Texas have not been greatly troubled by the cool weather and late frosts. The weather, however, has been unseasonably cool, even to this date, and planting has been delayed. Many growers in West Texas say this is the latest cotton planting they have ever seen, and many are inclined to reduce the acreage they had planned to plant. Where other crops can be planted to the land that had been replanted to the land that had been re-served for cotton, such crops are being planted, and all in all, it is indicated that the cotton crop in West Texas may be reduced possibly one-fourth. It is too early to form any opinion as to the yield, or even as to the total acreage that will be cultivated, as there is possibility that much of the early planting will be abandoned for various reasons. Cotton traders generally express the belief that cotton this year will brin a high price, and this view seems t be held by most of the growers. Plans for co-operative m in Texas are going forward.

†Cents a thousand. RAILWAYS BONDS CALLED PHILADELPHIA, June 12—The American Electric Power Company, formerly the American Railways Company, is giving notice to the holders of American Railways Company three-year 7½ per cent extended gold notes that the notes have been called for payment and redemption on Aug. 1, 1923, at 101, together with the interest due.

RAILROAD ISSUES NOW RESPONDING TO 1923 OUTLOOK

ome Mark Advances as High as 12 Points-Dividend Increases Expected

With loadings of revenue freight son, and with net operating of Class I roads for April at the rate of Class I roads for April at the rate of 6½ per cent of tentative valuation, railroad stocks have begun at last to respond to their excellent 1923 earnings prospects.

Naturally the stocks that have advanced most are those where the possibilities of dividend inauguration or increases are the best. In such cases advances from the 1923 low amount to a dozen points and much more from the 1922 lows.

Central's Dividend Meeting

Attention is focussed upon the New York Central meeting Wednesday for there is strong expectation of a divithere is strong expectation of a divi-dend increase. Such action would have deep significance, not only for New York Central stockholders, bui for those of all the railroads. Atchi-son, which is earning at the rate of about 15 per cent on its common stock, is another high-grade rail that could well afford to increase the distribu-tion to its common stock holders. Inauguration of dividends on Pere Marquette common at the annual rate

Marquette common at the annual rate of $4 indicates that faith in the so-called "little rails" has not been entirely misplaced and that there are distinct possibilities in other sections of this class.

For example, Baltimoré & Ohio, in the first four months of 1923, was earning at the rate of more than $15 a share on its $152,000,000 common stock, based on normal seasonal variation. Even if final results are not as good as this, the balance for the common promises to be large. There is more than a possibility that Baltimore & Ohio may resume common dividends this year, thereby keeping its bonds legal for savings banks in New York.

Rock Island, in the first four months

Rock Island, in the first four months of 1923, did not make a very good showing in comparison with last year, but its earnings are now coming strong and results in the next few months are expected to be very gratifying. There are predictions in some quarters that Rock Island may start common dividends next year.

Southern Rallway Outlook Southern Railway common stock is showing good earnings and has ad-vanced more than 11 points from the year's low. In 1922 the road earned $4.85 a share on the $120,000,000 com mon stock and current earnings are at the rate of between $3 to $10 a share. Dividends have been restored on the preferred stock and it is expected that this time they can be maintained. Dividends on the common are a possibility.

YACHTS START ON OCEAN RACE

New Bedford Schooner Black Hawk Leads the Fleet Over the Starting Line

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 12-A score of small but stanch yachts started from the mouth of the Thames River today on an adventurous quest across the Gulf Stream for the racing honors of the Western North Atlantic Ocean in a 662-mile contest to Ber-

Weather conditions at the start were very gentle, but all the yachtsmen were prepared for bolsterous work offshore. A lazy and smoky northerly wind wafted the boats out of Long Island Sound and into Gardiner's Bay on the first leg of the run, with Mon-tauk Point hidden in the haze 20 miles ahead. It looked at noon as if, with the assistance of a strong ebb tide; the fleet would be able to make a good departure from Montauk Point before

The yachts started in two divisions, with the larger boats leaving at 10 a. m., Eastern Standard time, which is the time used by all chronometers, followed 16 minutes later by the smaller craft.

The big black New Bedford schooner Black Hawk, designed, owned and sailed by W. H. Hand Jr. of the whaling city, led the fleet over the line and set the pace on the four-mile run to Race Rock.

The Ladonia, owned by Homer Loring of Boston was the last boat in this division. The Ladonia is the biggest yacht in the fleet, giving time to all The Ladonia is the biggest

There was a lively scrap for position in the second division between the Malabar IV, Mary Ann and Demaris, all three schooners running along the line just before gun fire, then squaring away at the signal. The wind being dead astern, all the yachts went off with booms well out to star-board and some broke out spinnakers for the run across to Gardiner's Bay. Despite the fact that the wind was off-shore it was very thick a few miles out in the Sound and fog signals were heard in all directions. It is expected the larger boats will reach Bermuda Saturday and the smaller craft a day later.

Just before the start the committee announced that the yawl Chaos of Newport, R. I., had been barred from the contest, but that Capt. J. B. Ball would make the run to Bermuda on his own account without hope of a

Sir Thomas Lipton. It was then put on record that the rig in which the whole of the sail abaft the mast was in one, was not suitable for yachts of the size of the contestants on that occasion.

In view of that expression of opinion, it was considered all the more daring when Nicholson applied the rig to a vessel of about the same length in the water-line as the challenger. Results appear to have justified the experiment, for quite recently, our Yacht Racing Association has made a slight modification in the measurement of the topsails of ordinarily rigged vessels as compensaordinarily rigged vessels as compensation for the superiority of the Bermudian rig. For setting the sail there is a metal tramway running right up the mast, and hanks fastened onto the luff of the sail are led on to this tramway as the sail is being hoisted. This sail is generally recognized as superior for going to windward with an advantage n the saving of the weight of a gaff

In regard to Nyria, it is interesting to note that the novelty, so far as a big yacht is concerned, has been intro-duced by a lady owner. Mrs. Workman comes from a well-known yachting family. She was a Miss Allan and nails from Clyde. She is a very enthusiastic vachtswoman and it is a man can spare the time from business to snatch a few days sailing with the young son and daughters aboard.

It is difficult to realize that one is aboard a racer when below in Nyria, which is luxuriously fitted. The owner's artistic taste is shown in the decorative scheme. The vessel was entirely refitted below in 1921 at a captain of the 1924 track team.

RED TOP, Conn., June 11—The Harvard crews in training here for the Yale-Harvard regatta rowed to the three-mile mark and back early this evening, taking a fast half mile at a high stroke on the trip back. This afternoon the crews visited the submarine base and inspected the S-34 and S-35. It is expected that they will take a short trip on the S-22 tomorrow.

The victors outful the losers, 14 to S. Although each team made errors, Exeter was the chief offender with seven, many of which resulted in Andover runs. W. R. Shoop '24 took the pitching assignment for Andover and held the losers to eight scattered hits. The third and eighth innings were the only two in which he weakened, Exeter scoring two runs each time. R. A. Sawyer pitched for Exeened, Exeter scoring two runs each time. R. A. Sawyer pitched for Exeter until the eighth, when he was removed in favor of Stone.

HAGEN QUALIFIES FOR BRITISH OPEN

Eugene Sarazen, Barnes and Hoffner, American Professionals Are Eliminated

TROON, Scotland, June 12 (AP)-W. C. Hagen, American holder of the British open golf championship, just managed to squeeze by the qualification play for the open title this year, tying for last place with an aggregate of 159 for the 36 holes.

Eugene Sarazen, J. M. Barnes and Charles Hoffner, three of the American professional golfers, failed to qualify in the two days' play which ended this afternoon.

Hagen took 77 for his second round.

making his aggregate 159.

Hagen was erratic on the outward nine holes, but pulled himself together on the homeward route. He played poorly on each of the first five holes. On the sixth he took a birdie 3, fol-lowing this with another birdie on the par 3 seventh hole, but again his game fell off, and he finished with a and a 6 for a total of 41 at the turn From then he was his usual brilliant self, and came home in even 4s. His putts. His card read:

82, giving him a total of 161. Diegel also made the round in 82 for a total of 159. Alexander Herd scored

John Farrell had a 77 in his second badly on this round, doing no better than an 84, which gave him an aggregate of 162, while Farrell was five strokes lower with 157. Armour likewise had a 7 on the second, but failed to steady afterward, while Farrell settled down following his mishap. George Duncan, a former champion

75 for a total of 155. C., J. H. Tolley, former amateur champion, had a 75 for a total of 153 while J. H. Kirkwood, former Australian open champion, now a resident of the United States, had 76 for a total of 152. MacDonald Smith was well down in the list of qualifiers with 152 as the result of a 77 today, while Harry Vardon, a former champion, had an 87 today giving him a total of 163, thus eliminating him from the championship proper.

Smith's 77 for today's round put him among the leaders. His shots with the wood clubs were invariably straight and his irons were deadly. le was seemingly careless on the reens, however, missing several easy utts. Both he and Hagen were orced to play part of their round in a driving rain. Smith's card:

Out...... 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 3 4—37 In...... 4 5 5 4 3 6 4 4 5—40—77 Barnes fell down on the last nine holes, where three sixes helped to swell his total to 42. His putting, like Hagen's was particularly faulty. The greens were slowed up by a heavy rain in the late afternoon and many putts were short. Barnes' card:

CHOUSE

A NEW YORK writer points out that the Yankees submitted only to the best pitching the National League champions had to offer in their two world series, but that now even the discards of the senior organization can go in and stop M. J. Huggins' clan. Louis Cvengros, of whom much has been heard as a White Sox recruit, was turned adrift by J. J. McGraw a few months ago; defeated by the Yankees in 15 innings, 1 to 0, in Chicago, he beat them in their own park last week. S. M. Smith, for several years a star lefthander with Brooklyn, has caught on with the Cleveland Indians as a regular, it appears, for he had far the better of H. J. Pennock yesterday, causing the latter to undergo his second successive defeat after six winning starts.

Walter Lutzke's batting in yesterday's contest is reason for much Cleveland encouragement. The third baseman, in addition to playing his usual game in the field, drove out two hits, one of which—a home run in the second inning—started the visitors' scoring. A splendid Monday crowd of 15,000 saw the Yankees continue along the losing road.

The Boston Nationals' newly-acquired battery has not made a very auspicious start. But it is too early to form an opinion of J. L. Barnes' value to the Braves. When he was traded off by Boston several years ago, he was acknowledged to be one of the best right-handers in baseball, but it has gone without saying that J. J. McGraw was not going to part with a bona fide star boxman with the Giants in their present need of pitchers.

Earl Smith, by the way, came through very nicely on his first appearance in a Braves' uniform, singling in timely fashion when inserted as a pinch hitter Saturday. In Sunday's game he went hitless but yesterday connected with G. C. Alexander's offerings for a pair of two-base hits. Manager F. F. Mitchell has placed Smith fifth in the Braves' lineup, just behind J. P. Mc-Innis, R. E. Smith, the young shortstop, batting eighth.

RICE PLEASED WITH COLUMBIA VARSITY

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 11-Form that brought words of approval from Coach J. C. Rice was shown in morning and afternoon drills on the Hudson by the Columbia varsity today. While the freshmen performed irregularly and the junior varsity boat was not up to the standard desired, the varsity gave "a nice bit of row-ing," Coach Rice said.

"They could walk away from the other eights today," was the way Rice summed up the work of his varsity

There was an evenness to the keel of the varsity boat that pleased Coach Rice because of extra effort devoted by him to its rigging, but an insufficiency of eagerness in the junior boat lege. drew sharp criticism. More changes in the freshman boat were promised.

Chicago at Boston. St. Louis at Washington. Cleveland at New York, Detroit at Philadelphia. RED SOX RALLY TOO LATE C. C. Robertson allowed only five hits in the first seven innings of vesterday's game, no two of which came in a sing game, no two of which came in a single inning, but in the eighth and ninth the Red Sox got after him in earnest and came within a notch of tying the score. Ira Flagstead's single. W. L. Fewster's two-base hit and N. A. McMillan's timely single brought the score to 5-and-3, and in the last session Albert DeVormer and Howard Shanks each hit for three bases, the latter with two out. But Robertson put on his best and ended the game. Chicago batted J. J. Quinn safely in all the first six innings. Stellar work by the rival second basemen and a catch of H. B. Hooper's in deep right field featured. The score:

INCREASE OF ASIATICS MENACES WHITE RACE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Segregation Proposed as Means to Solve Problem That Confronts United States, Canada, and Australia

CAPE TOWN, May 4 (Special Correspondence)—The Asiatic problem of South Africa is the same problem that confronts the United States, Canada, and the Commonwealth of Australia, it is the problem of the white race fighting to preserve for itself a white country within the zone of Asiatic migration. South Africa has grappled with the problem by means of restrictive, immigration laws and the like, but despite this the problem still remains, and at moments becomes acute. Recently an attempt was made in Parliament to institute further legislation against the Asiatic, and this islation against the Asiatic, and this time the proposal was one of segre-

It should be remembered that the problem of the Asiatic chiefly concerns the Province of Natal. In the Union of South Africa there are 185,000 Asiatics, of whom 141,000 are in Natal. In Durban alone there are 52,000 Asiatics as against 57,000 Europeans, and the Asiatics are spreading into nearly every walk of

Naturally, the other provinces of the Union, though not so concerned with the Asiatic, have a great deal of sympathy with the Europeans in Natal, who are actually outnumbered by the Asiatics. Yet they point out that the people of Natal are responsi-ble for the existence of the present problems, for they agreed to the original importation of Asiatic labor, which was the source of the whole

The native races of Africa have not shown themselves capable of skilled agricultural labor, and so soon as Natal began to exploit sugar cane crops on a large scale, the capable Indian coole was brought over and utilized. On the close of their indentures many of the Indians remained in the country as traders, market gardeners, etc., and owing to an inferior standard of living have practically ousted the whites from many of the smaller villages and towns.

There has been a constant anti-Indian campaign in Natal and repatriation has gone on steadily combined with restrictive immigration. Considerable illicit immigration persists, however, mainly through the neighboring Portuguese territory of Mozam-bique. Years ago the anti-Asiatic campaign was as vigorous as it is now in Natal and great public demonstrations were made. But the problem was still unsettled when Natal came into the Union, and it is the Union that has now to face the problem.

The Government have gone so far as to promise that a bill will be introduced next session which will enable municipal and urban authorities. if they desire, to apply a compulsory system of segregation for Asiatics in such areas, provided that they have satisfied a Government Board that the provision made is adequate and rea-sonable, and provided also that the board, after hearing the community affected, considers that the circumstances render such residential and trading segregation desirable.

The policy of segregation has its dangers. The Asiatic Commission, which recently reported on the problem in South Africa while strongly in favor of segregation, was emphatically against compulsion. They showed that where segregation was even partially carried out, the tend-

Governments Blamed for Official Acts, and King Alfonso's Name Coupled With Royal Decrees

MADRID, May 24 (Special Correspondence) The position of past ministers becomes increasingly difficult as the intensity of the campaign of punishment against the military officers concerned in the Morocco failure increases. Señor Alejandro Lerroux, the Republican leader, has just made a strong election speech at Barcelona in which he expressed his regret that the Gov-ernment had not been able to profit by the renaissance of Spanish patriotism which had emanated from the conse-quences of defeat, and demanded that the responsibilities should not be sought only among the military ele-ments but also among those, equally blameworthy, who continued to exer-cise political power.

King Alfonso Mentioned

The King's name becomes more and nore frequently mentioned. The suggestion is not that Don Alfonso has taken any active measures which have led to the Moroccan disasters, but that he was passive when he should have resisted the acts of governments. Yet everybody is fully aware that it was not in his power to do anything of the kind.

The possibility of the politicans being called to account and the further possibility of their being sent to jail-extremists even talk of something worse—which seemed but fanciful bogeys when first mentioned some weeks ago have most distinctly come into the region of practicabilities. It is remarked that, short of some great upheaval, it is difficult to see how they are to escape. The year 1909 from which, with untoward events at Melilla, the worst modern troubles become access to be taken as the separate. gan, seems to be taken as the separating line, but on behalf of the politicians, or former ministers as they are better described, it is suggested that the investigations must go much farther back.

The Army, however, are every day making it more difficult for the politicians to escape. The supreme military and naval tribunal is dealing with some fifty cases of officers who are considered responsible for Melilla, some of whom below already been consome of whom have already been convicted, but too lightly.

Men Named in Picasso Report They are the men who have come within the range of the famous Picasso report, for the publication of which authorities of every kind, military and even partially carried out, the tend-ency was almost invariably to create slums.

The Rev. C. F. Andrews, when studying the question in South Africa being said that at any cost whatso- supreme tribunal to arraign him but some time ago, expressed the belief ever that report should have been the appeal has been rejected. Another that if the present immigration laws were enforced for 20 years, the Asiatic problem in South Africa would questions are being put upon the disaster, was sent to take charge of the disappear. Mr. Patrick Duncan, Min-ister of Interior for the Union, when outlining the policy of the Govern-ment recently, takes practically the same view. He refuses to believe that

It was fortunate for Bulgaria that during the peribd of crisis our Minister to the United States was so able, honest and intelligent a man as Mr. Stephan Panaretoff. The treatment which the State Department accorded to him after our entrance into the war, in the face of violent allied clamoring for his dismissal constitutes a bright page in the history of both America and Bulgaria. # News of Freemasonry

Special from Monitor Bureau

London, June 1
THE one hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls has passed, marking another milestone in a long straight path of self-sacrifice and devotion to high ideals and the welfare of others. The total amount collected was £80,251 13s., 1d., of which sum Sussex, the chairman's province, brought up £26,663 6s. 2d. at the hands of 1267 stewards out of a total number of 4354 stewards, which was the highest total the province had ever sent to the institution. The Duke of Richmond, Provincial Grand Master, was to have presided, but was un-avoidably prevented, and his place was taken by his deputy, Major R. Lawrence Thornton, Past Grand

Deacon, who certainly made an admirable substitute. The Province of Sussex has certainly reason to be proud of its con-nection with Freemasonry. The first Duke was acquainted with the locality before he purchased the Goodwood estate, as there is on record the fact that he made a present of a fat buck to the Corporation of St. Pancras in Chichester for their dinner on Nov. 4, 1689. Kent, the author of "Records and Reminiscences of Goodwood and the Dukes of Richmend," says that he was intimately associated with the worthies of Chichester and the neighborhood as the master of a retreet of Col. Miles I Stankier of the master of a retreet of Col. Miles I Stankier of the master of a retreet of Col. Archibald Crawford, an active Free mason in the west of Scotland, has just had the distinction of initiating his six sons in the St. Mark's Lodge, No. 102, Glasgow, of which he is a Past Master. The incident, however, is not "unique" as has been claimed for in January, 1913, C. F. Easton initiated his six sons in the Robert Mitchell Lodge, No. 2946 at the Poly-technic, Regent Street, London, which constituted a record in the annals of Freemasonry which has not yet been America is traditionally our friend. We Bulgarians deely appreciate all that Americans have done for us in promoting education, culture, and industrial progress. Every government that Bulgaria has ever had has shown its deep appreciation of the American spirit and of the unselfishness of American purposes.

After the fateful decision was reached that Bulgaria should join the central powers against the Allies in the war, communication between Sofia and America were broken, with the exception of one or two brief intervals. ### ITALIAN PREMIER DISPLAYS VIGOR

Undersecretaries Dismissed, He Works Still Harder and Acts More and More as Dictator

ROME, May 23 (Special Correspondence)—The time is at hand when the ence)—The time is at hand when the Fascist Government will have to deal with various serious difficulties. The resignation of Signor Devecchi, Undersecretary at the Ministry of Finance, and Signor Mussolini's plain statement that "the Fascist Government has prevent intended to attack ment has never intended to attack and destroy the Constitution and the parliamentary institutions" have been received with satisfaction by moderate men as proof of the statesmanship of the Premier. But there will doubtless be dissatisfaction among his more violent followers.

It has always been evident from the time that Signor Mussolini became Prime Minister, that his greatest trouble would come from his own too zealous supporters. His brother's organ, the Popolo d'Italia (of which he was himself formerly editor) has used no ambiguous language toward these minor personages of Fascismo. Its Roman correspondent, who is in close touch with the Premier, writes "Italy needs a dictatorship, of one man only" and advocates "discipline or the rod" for "petty proconsuls with ill-considered ambi-

The Fascist leader is becoming more and more of a dictator. He has sup-pressed six undersecretaryships, and none of the 11 ministers counts for much except himself. The Chamber will not meet again till the autumn, so that in a year it will have sat for only 20 days altogether. Unquestionably the country is better administered than before; but good administration, desirable as it is, is not everything. Germany, under the Prussian system, was perhaps better administered than Great Britain, yet no independent citizen would prefer the Prussian to the

In the press, however, there is more criticism than formerly. The Corriere della Sera, for example, considers that the High Commissioner of Raiiways has got rid of some of the most competent authorities in railway management, and that not enough has been yet done to restore the balance between the expenses and the earnings of the lines. A high financial expert informs me that the total deficit of the Italian budget for the financial year ending June 30 will be about 4.000,-000,000 lire. But this does not take into consideration Italy's indebtedness to Great Britain (£503,000,000), upon which no interest has been paid, or that to the United States (more than half as much). In both these cases the accruing interest is simply added to the capital.

There has been a steady rise in the price of Italian consols, which, issued at par, have now passed 89, a figure never reached before. The logical fallacy of "post hoc, propter hoc" warns us not to attribute to Mr. Mussolini's rule all the improvements which have followed it. Still, it has undoubtedly improved the price of consols, because it has made Italians harder workers.

It was hoped by Mr. Mussolini, that he might have been able to show some material advantage as the result of King George's visit to Rome. Italy claims colonial compensation under Article XIII of the secret treaty of London of 1915, for the accession to Great Britain and France of the German colonies. Lord Milner agreed e it a large part of Jubaland, adjoins it. Italy then asked for a furpromised. Then Italy wanted a third developed. It may, however, because of Italian delays, partly because the British Governtegral part of the general settlement of the Eastern question. Accordingly, on Oct. 15 Lord Curzon sent a note the Facta Cabinet intimating that, if Italy did not cede the Dodecanese to Greece it would not get Jubaland. Signor Mussolini, who found this note on his becoming Premier, replied in a conciliatory tone on Nov. 3, and the question was not discussed at Lausanne. There are signs that some, at least, of the islands will be ceded; in that case Jubaland will become

PETROGRAD HOPES

While it does not seem probable that there is any immediate chance of the Bolshevist Government moving the capital back to Petrograd, nevertheless some institutions which help to less some institutions which help to overcrowd Moscow are to be moved to Petrograd this summer. This will further increase the population. Business conditions in Petrograd, however, do not seem as bright as they were last summer. Special from Monitor Buredu LONDON, May 24 - Neither the capital nor the annual value of the products of the new Polish provinces in Upper Silesia can be estimated with sufficient precision to possess any statistical importance. But it goes without saying that the Polish State will find in her Silesian provinces an asset of incalculable value. They will render possible a solid industrial future for the whole country. It is not only the access to raw materials, but the fact that they are available without paying duties in foreign currencies that matters. The rich coal mines, the metal deposits, the foundries, and, generally, the large engineering and chemical plants which had reached so high a degree of development in German hands represent a solid foundation on which to build an independent economic existence.

The Silesian provinces are pecul-arly complementary to Poland and will facilitate a new-industrial development impossible under German restrictions which were designed to strangle all Polish efforts. Polish agriculture will benefit enormously from Silesian fertilizers, while the Silesian boot factories and the former Prussian tanneries will greatly stimulate the Polish leather trade.

Coal for 2000 Years

The coal of Upper Silesia, at the which belongs to British East Africa, with the port of Kismagu, so as to round off Italian Somaliland, which hich is, as yet, difficult to estimate what the addition to the coal output of ther slice of British territory, includ- Poland will amount to until the mines ing Port Durnford, and this, too, was in Polish Silesia have been properly piece, but this was refused, and the at once that they have not deteriorated other two have not been handed over, in Polish hands, but show a highly creditable progressive increase in output, in view of the difficult condiment now considers that the question of compensations should form ah inacquisition. In 1922, the average output per month was about 2,270,000 tons. In pre-war days Poland imported on the average from 8,000,000 to 10,000 000 tons annually from Upper Silesia which, with her home output, brought up her supplies to 20,000,000, the amount required for home consumption. The home supplies now exceed the pre-war level, so that the annual which will leave a growing surplus available for export and make Poland a coal-exporting instead of an importing country and, to an appreciable extent, improve her trade balance.

The production of coke is another matter. As the quality of Silesian coke is only indifferent and is not suitable for blast furnaces it is probable that Poland will continue her import of coke from the Karvin district in Czechoslovakia and other countries. A project for the construc-tion of a canal from Upper Silesia to the Vistula is still only in the air, and depends upon foreign capital.

Silesian Iron Industry

It is popularly believed that Upper Silesia is rich in iron, but, as a matter of fact, the output fell until in 1913 it came down to 138,204 tons. Germany had to come to the assistance of the 36 Silesian furnaces by supplyas from Sweden and Norway. Poland has large supplies of iron seams in all parts of the country, notably in Con-gress Poland. Professor Bogdanowicz prepared a report estimating that the reserves amounted to 300,000,000 tons. Although not of high quality, it was largely smelted in the Silesian foundries during the war, a German company producing 2,000,000 tons. The accession of the Silesian foundries is beyond doubt an important Polish

JURGENS TRADE OUTLOOK BETTER

Sharp Decline of Mark Cause of Former Decrease in Profits

THE HAGUE, May 27 (Special Correspondence)-The Jurgens Margarine Works, with a subscribed share capital of 110,000,000 guilders and 40,000,000 guilders 6 per cent bonds outstanding, recently published their annual report for 1922.

They state that the difficulties during the last years were not caused by trade depression, but were due to the instability of foreign valuta. The volume of business in Holland, Germany, and other countries where this powerful concern has its affiliations, was very satisfactory. The sharp decline of the mark was the main cause for the decrease in profits. In order to offset the disadvantages thus encountered, the directorate of the works endeavored to sell their goods at gold value, even in the low valuta countries. This policy proved successful, especially in the second half of the year 1922, when the buying of raw materials could be done at a price leaving a fair margin for profits. Subsidiary companies were reorgan-ized, and will consequently show in future a decrease of expenditure. The holdings of the Jurgens works in other companies now amounts to 114,000,000 guilders. This is about 15,000,000 guilders less than last year, because shares in a foreign company were sold to one of the companies' subsidiaries abroad for that amount. The 1922 profits were $,100,000 guilders after deducting interest on the 40,000,000 guilders 6 per cent bonds. The dividend on the cumulative preference shares absorbs 5,000,000 guilders of this total. As last year, no dividend is paid on the ordinary shares, the balance, $,100,000 cariders, being carried forward to simply done-indeed simplicity is the keynote of the whole production, as it was probably the keynote of the great Protector's career. "Coming events cast their shadows before" is a truism that few people understand, but John Drinkwater is certainly one of those who does. Although his dramatic characters are making history and producing world-wide and lasting effects, none of them except Oliver the great man of vision, seems quite to realize the fact. That is as it should be and is surely a more faithful historical portrayal than a great play portrayed in the grand manner in which every character from the least to the greatest would seem imbued with the author's vision, as well as his

The play is an intimate portrayal of Cromwell at home and afield, in his domestic and his public life; not just a great play of times in which he is foremost figure, like Shakespeare's 'Julius Cæsar." And the real Cromwell is much more at home in his fields at Ely beneath the shadow of the great Cathedral than he is on the battlefield, or leading the Commons of England in the Chapel of St. Stephen. Like George Washington, he enters public life under protest and that is surely why his work is so well done. His life's work was a sacrifice; not fulfillment of an ambition. At heart he was a John Bunyan, and was not altogether unlike him exteriorly. The domestic scenes are all good, especially the first, where the sinister agents of the Earl of Bedford intrude upon family prayer and praise in the happy home. The sound of the spinnet has scarcely died away, the yokels have barely finished singing "Old Hundred," when these two gentry arrive from the changed into an ugly growl, from the anyone tenantry outside on the lawn.

The next scene is in St. Stephen's certainly emulated his great proto-Chapel, Westminster. The Commons type. Whenever he was on the scenes are at an end," shouts the great Protector as he storms from the room.

After this comes what is perilously like an anticlimax. The two following scenes dealing with the execution of the King, and the passing of Crom-well's mother, are not quite so impressive as they should be, especially We do not see the King but former. we hear the muffled murmurs of the crowd and rolling of the drums, and a single solitary shriek of pent-up feeling as the ax falls. It all should have been very impressive, but somehow it missed fire, perhaps because we were not allowed to see this ignoble monarch in his one noble moment, a no Earl with their ominous threats and bility which makes his executioners warning. Cromwell, however, is no seem ignoble. Charles had committed

Here again there of popular attention than ever before. was a tendency to overlay the essen-The Kamerny Theater, which went on tour in Germany last month, sought eagerly after new effects in stage scenery and background.

Meierhold's Theater experimented along the line of dispensing as far as ossible with scenic decorations, presenting its productions against a bare and subdued background. The Theater of the Revolution specialized in plays of a definitely social character. Many of the works of the imprisoned German Communist playwright and poet, Ernst Toller, were given there. The traditions of the Russian classical stage were upheld in the Maly Theter, which built up its repertoire largely out of the works of Gogol, Ostrovsky and other well-known Rusian dramatists.

The dramatic critic of the Moscow newspaper, Izvestia, summing up the work of the last season, declared that fit showed a strong tendency to emphasize external forms at the expense of internal meaning. The energy that was formerly devoted to the formulation and solution of inner problems was now employed in devising new theatrical tricks in capturing the at tention of the audience by means of novelties in stage arrangement and stage management.

This criticism was perhaps somewhat too severe. The Russian theater probably compared favorably with that of any other country during the last season in the proportional number of serious plays which it produced. At the same time there is a certain measure of truth in the critic's observations. The greatest success of the year was "Princess Turandot," which was played more than 100 times by the Third Studio of the Art Theater. Now "Princess Turandot" was an in-trinsically trivial and inconsequential work, quite similar in plot to the average American musical comedy. It derived all its appeal from the spright liness of the accompanying music, the rich coloring of the costumes and scenery and the occasional topical hits were introduced in the course of the play.

In aiming to divert and amuse rather than to appeal to the intellect and the emotions "Princess Turandot" represented a relaxation of the higher and more austere ideals of the Russian stage. The whole play was given a spirit of playful unreality. actors put on and took off their costumes on the stage and fell into casual conversation with the spectators.

The culminating scene is at Hampton Court where Cromwell offers Charles, now a prisoner, a constitutional throne, strengthened, reuphol stered and comfortably padded, and Cromwell himself, and the army at his back, will be his liege's most loyal subjects. And in token of his good will (a capital touch, this) Oliver presents the King and connoisseur with a beautiful little miniature, which the King accepts with an easy graciousness; but asks for three days' grace to consider whether he will accept the greater gift. Cromwell readily grants it, and then a chance accident reveals the King's perfidy. His Majesty wants his three days' grace not to consider his acceptance, but to consummate yet another plot for the betraval of his people and their faith, of which he is the defender. Cromwell turns on the King who pompously signifies that "the argument is at an end." "All arguments the Hearth," "Twelfth Night," and "The Taming of the Shrew." The Second Studio gave Schiller's "The Robbers" and Ostrovsky's "Storm." The Studios propose to give several interesting productions in the near future, including "Hamlet," "King Lear" and Aristophanes' "Lysistratae. The Izvestia critic hopes that the production of this Greek comedy may "give an impetus to the develo of our national farce." W. H. C.

An Academy of Dramatists

A serpent time by the forelock, has fathered a newspaper symposium in a wall that there is a dearth of good plays and proffered as a remedy the creation of an Academy for Dramatists.

That wall—I had nearly written whale—is as old as dramatic creation, and it is loudest when the theaters are having a bad time. I remember that in the seventies, when Sardou. Augier, Dumas fils—and a phalanx of famous authors—were in flower, when the Paris Theater was the cynosure of all European eyes, the maleonitents started a campaign to deplore the parlous state of the drama and that Sarcey at one of his famous Thursday lunches settled the question with a quotation adapted for the purpose: "Les gens que vous dites morts, se portent à merveille."

Some answer of this kind should be that. given to our actor with the rider: It is not the plays that are wanting, it is the theaters to produce them. In other be tax on the part of British managers, they would find that there are plenty of plays in waiting, but that it is deemed a safer policy to import from America and the Continent, works which have stood the test, than to leap in the dark with home-grown plays. This applies not only to the aspirants, of whom there are many, and some very whom there are many, and some very promising—has not Mr. Dennis Eadie himself adopted a play which would never have been heard of but for the experimental performances by the Stage Society?—I refer to "At Mrs. Beam's," by C. K. George, Mr. Gilbert Frankau, to name a few-whether they have not knocked at managerial doors and knocked in vain. The fact is that there is only one manager in London, who, finan-cially well supported, has a definite policy and the courage to break new ground. Mr. Basil Dean, sending forth his prospectus of the Play Box, which is soon to begin operations at the Ambassador Theater, gives a fla-grant contradiction to the fashionable complaint. He has found original plays enough to last for some con-siderable time, and he indicates that if he could prophesy the result of his new campaign, he could have doubled and trebled his list. For the supply of plays worth doing is beyond all comparison with the demand. So much for one side of the question. Now for the other.

Is an Academy for Dramatists needed, is it practicable, would it produce results? The answers to all three questions are in the negative. It is not needed because there is no public for it. At the best of times theater.

Upward of 10,000 people heard the 2400-year-old romance told, in which Miss Anglin played the part of Phedra. Boyd Irwin acted Hippolytus. The Gilbert Murray translation was used.

The only additions to the permanent stage were two large statues, modeled by William Huff of New York City to represent the goddesses of Artemis and Aphrodite. These, together with the chorus of university women furnished a typical setting for the depiction of Venus' wrath when the goddess of love is spurned by Hippolytus for Diana, the infatuation of Phædra, the young Cretan queen, for Hippolytus, and her tragic ending when spurned by Hippolytus.

Today, with the revived consciousness of Trollope's high standing in Victorian fiction, we can re-ceive with gratitude the whole-some tonic of his revelations: and some tonic of his revelations: and since so many of us are more and more inclined to seek refuge from modern fiction in the cool shelves where Jane Austen, Scott, Thackeray, Dickens and Trollope reign, we are glad to hear how it was that Barchester was evolved and that so Ho-meric a story-teller so seldom, in his

In addition to this we always spent six weeks at least out of England. Few men, I think, ever lived a fuller life. And I attribute the power of doing this altogether to the virtue of early hours. The Challenge of Trollope

A BLOW in the face from the fist of Anthony Trollope could hardly have a more dasing effect upon the young literary aspirant than a study of that novelist's Autoblography, now reprinted in a happy moment in "The World's Classics", and if it strikes the modern author and if it strikes the modern author and the modern critic like the playful but powerful fist of a giant, it will bring comfort and strength into the heart of many a wife and mother who has to put up with the successive failures and trying habits of that obvious—but strangely unrecognised—genius, her husband or son. Authony Trollope preached the moral of his own career to a generation which laughed at the message: his honesty of purpose and aggressive frankness injured alt the message: his honesty of purpose and aggressive frankness injured his own reputation: and people who had read each of his many novels eagerly as they were published merely saw in the tale the crumbling

This sort of sane, deliberate counsel, frankly given-or rather almost forced upon the public-by Trollope, ruined his reputation. It provoked and insulted the æsthetic Eighties. They shrank from what seemed a brutal exposition of the machinery of writing—the lowering of it to the level of the shoemaker's craft. But we today cannot be scandalized in the same way. Hundreds, nay thousands, of authors have learnt that by system -by intensive self-training-they can enormously increase their output with out in the least tarnishing their talents. Tarnish comes from misuse or disuse. Brilliance comes from inces sant activity. The very highest stand ard may be reached in spasmodic bursts, but it can be maintained by resolute industry. "It is the tortoise which always catches the hare. The hare has no chance. He loses more time in glorifying himself for a quick spurt than sufficies for the tortoise to make half the journey."

THE outstanding question in Europe undoubtedly remains that of reparations, and even though there is an early advance, made toward a solution, it will continue in one form or another to hang over Europe for some years to come. What is now suggested is a moratorium. Even in France it begins to be recognized that there must be a provisional arrangement and not a final solution. It will depend very much upon a temporary adjustment being made, whether the greatest and most disturbing happenings will come upon the continent. Because there is no normal life, because the economic rebuilding of all the European countries is obstructed by these endless discussions, there is now a serious risk of Communist movements.

If once Communism, provoked by monetary fluctuations and difficulty in procuring foodstuffs, begins in one great industrial nation, there is no knowing where it will end. There cannot be set up barriers between France and Germany. There are no water-tight compartments which will not be burst if once the flood of revolutionary sentiment sweeps across Europe. There is, of course, no intention here of painting a pessimistic picture, and it is indeed impossible to believe that the European statesmen will allow the spread of Communism. But, nevertheless, it is as well to issue the warning that financial and commercial reactions will be universal, and that financial upheaval may easily bring political upheaval.

Many national currencies are already affected by the depreciation of the mark and of the franc. It means unemployment. It means a check to commerce. Even the United States, which stands outside the immediate sphere of European influences, cannot be indifferent to the consequences; for settlement or nonsettlement of the European problem may make all the difference between prosperity and nongrosperity in America. There is every reason, then, to watch with the most careful eye the progressive deterioration of Germany and to hail with pleasure the smallest sign of the provisional arrangement that must precede the final discussions, from which in all probability, whether they come soon or whether they come late, the United States cannot be excluded.

There can be no doubt that Germany is largely to blame for all that has taken place. The German Government deliberately mismanaged the financial affairs of the State and allowed the mark to sink to the lowest level, believing that in this way Germany might escape from the obligation to pay the Allies large sums. If once the mark became valueless, it was argued, then the patience of the Allies would be worn out, and it would be considered that reparations were impossible. Unfortunately for this reasoning, France did not, as might have been expected. give up the collection of its debts as a bad job, but was only stimulated to more drastic action. This action has seemed the more unjust to the German people because they know that they have in fact made heavy payments. The latest report of the Reparations Commission shows the total payments made by Germany to exceed $250,000,000. But under other sections of the treaty Germany has made further heavy payments, estimated at over $500,000,000, which include the cost of the

It is true that the occupation of the Ruhr did not improve the situation, but rather made it worse, although the French case can be readily understood. For several years France had remained passively expectant that Germany would at last make an effort to pay; and almost in despair resorted to methods which in themselves are to be deprecated, but in the circumstances must be regarded as perfectly natural and as giving France the last hope of obtaining something of what is due and solemnly promised in compensation for the ruins left by Germany. Pressure of some kind was necessary; otherwise, Germany would have escaped scatheless.

It must always be remembered that if Germany had managed to shake off the burden of this external debt by the simple means of depreciating the mark, the country would in a relative sense have become much richer than France, and would indeed have had an advantage over every country in Europe. With the fall of the mark the internal debt practically disappears, and thus the State has a clean slate. It can make a fresh start. With what would it make a fresh start? With real riches and resources that are entirely untouched. The financial troubles would not, it was calculated, affect the economic machinery. Germany is magnificently equipped. Its industries are prepared for a development such as they have never seen. Its ports and railways and factories are in good running order.

The plan was, from the purely national point of view, excellent. It had only one defect. It is impossible to play with fire without running the risk of being scorched. It may be that the process of depreciation has gone too far, that it will be impossible to stop its effects. The first signs of Communism, the first émeutes, the growing dissatisfaction of the people, should have given pause to the German Government. They should also have given pause to the French Government. It is perhaps not too late to close this quarrel, to come to some sensible arrangement that will be in the interests of both France and Germany; for it cannot be repeated too strongly that the fates of the two countries are intertwined. No nation can stand aside and be indifferent to the affairs of its neighbor; the interdependence of the whole world is obvious. It is with joy, therefore, that we must greet any signs of a new search for a settlement, and, in spite of certain appearances to the contrary, it is plain that a sense of realities is to be observed among peoples and statesmen of Europe. Whether it will take a long or a short time to reach an accord, we are about to enter the path of negotiations, and this is a fact for which we must, in the hubbub and confusion, be profoundly grateful.

IT HAS been illuminatingly pointed out by some of those who have watched the progress of the campaign to make effective the crystallized public sentiment in the United States to outlaw and forever destroy the traffic in intoxicating liquors, that the movement has progressed through or into three definite periods or eras. First, there was the season of educa-

Prohibition tion, which most Americans recall as the period of temperanee agitation in the schools, churches and lyceums, carried on largely by public speakers and lecturers, and through the press in an effort to reach the homes and turn the thoughts, particularly of the young, in the right direction. Then came the period of legislation, first in the states separately, and then by action of Congress in the submission of the Eighteenth Amendment and in its ratification almost unanimously by the states.

The next period, which is that now reached, is the period of enforcement. This is the last stand of the combined forces representing the saloon, the distillery and the brewery. Unable to corrupt public opinion, unable longer to maintain the precarious position abused under the license system, the representatives of the liquor interests have entered upon a campaign of destruction, of nullification, and of guerrilla warfare from the shelter of the wrecks it has made, in an effort to make it appear that the enforcement of the law is impossible.

It may be, as has been asserted, that prohibition is just now facing its greatest test. But this is not a test of the fundamental soundness of the law. IIt is, rather, a test of the strength and endurance, the courage, forbearance and determination of those who have stood and are still standing for the right. The repeal of the state enforcement code in New York State has encouraged the nullificationists to renewed efforts in all the states, but perhaps more particularly in those of the Atlantic coast section. It is not unlikely, according to the view of those in charge of the organized activities of the Anti-Saloon League, that the nullificationists will spend large sums in many of the states in an effort to bring about, if possible, a repeal of local enforcement laws, as well as to prevent the enactment of such statutes in states where no such laws have already been passed.

In Massachusetts there is special need that the state Anti-Saloon League work be supported by every friend of the law. Those opposing the adoption of a state enforcement code are carrying the fight to the people in an effort to defeat, by referendum, the recent legislative enactment. This will by no means be a passive campaign. The allied liquor interests will, following the action in New York State, seek to defeat at the polls, an action which they were unable to prevent the Legislature from taking. Money will be spent freely in an effort to defeat the adoption of the law. The need is that the league, in the courageous and untiring defense of law and order and the rights of the people as a whole, be aided and supported by generous contributions.

It is undeniable that, despite the more or less close friendship which has been enjoyed by Great Britain and

Anglo-Swedish Friendship

Sweden for many years, the World War somewhat affected the relations between the two countries. Interestingly enough, they have never been at war, although during the Napoleonic period a state of however, obtained only on paper, existed for a while between them, but this was only technical. During the years immediately before the late war, relations were of the very best, so that in the course of the constitutional struggle proceeding at that time in Sweden appeal was frequently made to the example of England, and British parliamentarism undoubtedly exerdised no little influence on parliamentary development in

During the war, suspicious glances were cast across from England in the direction of Sweden many times, and there are some who today still feel that the attitude of neutrality which Sweden attempted to maintain was not altogether to its credit. Be that as it may, it is practically certain that during the conflict the Swedish Government made a strong effort not to incline to either party. Doubtless it made mistakes, but it is difficult not to agree that it did its best, according to its basic decision, to maintain the fundamentals of international right as it saw them, without regard for the personal feelings of Today without a doubt Sweden desires nothing much more than the re-establishment of its former completely cordial relationships with England. First, its economic interests point in this direction, England being the most important factor in Sweden's commercial activity, and Sweden's export to Great Britain being far more valuable than its export to any other country. Then, during late years there has been an increasingly noticeable interest in what Great Britain is doing along the line of literary development. The Anglo-Swedish Society, for example, has invited several prominent lecturers from England to visit Sweden. In other fields of endeavor, also, including sport, the influence of Great Britain is showing itself more and more markedly. There is no denying that the cultivation of understanding and friendship in any direction in the European field will help to overcome some of the ill effects of the war.

THE election campaign for the Ontario provincial Legislature is drawing to a close. When the voters go to the polls on June 25 they will have many candidates to choose from. It is one of the signs of the times in politics that in the place of the old rigid bi-party system, four or five parties or groups have candidates in the field. The present Government, bers and has enjoyed the general support of the Liberal group in the Legislature. The main opposition has come from the Conservative Party, but in the elections the Liberals are also running on a platform in opposition to

In numerous constituencies three candidates are running for one seat. In some single-member constituencies more than three candidates are nominated. Premier Drury has supporters in the cities who are running on what is called the Progressive platform. In some constituencies, too, there are independents who are not satisfied with the straight party nominations. When an Independent Conservative appears in the field, in addition to an official Conservative, it further tends to divide the electorate up into groups. The tendency thus in threecornered contests is to give the victory to a candidate with a minority of votes, where the majority is split over several unsuccessful candidates.

Premier Drury, anticipating this tendency toward independence of party, tried to pass legislation last session to bring in a more effective voting system. He proposed to apply the single transferable vote, or the alternative vote, as it is sometimes called, in all constituencies where more than two candidates were nominated for one seat. He also proposed to introduce proportional representation in some of the city constituencies, by grouping three or more of the present electoral divisions into one multi-membered constituency. But the Conservative Party in the Legislature put up such a determined opposition that the Government had to withdraw the more effective voting measure.

Opponents of proportional representation have objected that it leads to the splitting up of parties into groups. In Ontario the political groups have arrived without proportional representation. Whatever the results may be in this coming election, it is probable that public opinion will incline more toward a refinement in the method of voting which is intended to insure that the successful candidates are elected by the majority of votes.

IN HUMAN experience the time comes, sooner or later, when the theoretical rule—the rule of thumb, so called—must be tested and proved by the rule of reason and experience. Such a time is now coming to many young men and women in the United States and throughout the world, who, having completed their college courses, are preparing to make practical application of the knowledge they have gained. To some it will be a season of pleasing experiences as they find themselves possessed of the understanding which will enable them to unfold and analyze, and then to solve and reconstruct, from patterns and designs carefully drawn, those edifices, expressive of the progress of human thought, which it has been their ambition to erect. To others it will bring disappointment and disillusionment.

There is nothing unique in the position of these adventurers upon the great field of human activity. They are but repeating the experiences of mankind throughout all the ages. The unavoidable tendency seems always to be to adapt ourselves, our beliefs and prejudices, our acquired conceptions, of right and wrong, to the beliefs and prejudices and acquired conceptions of others. Allof which is unwise and imprudent in its way, because it does little more than make confusion worse confounded.

But the encouraging hope seems justified that humany is progressing in its search for fundamental truths which are more than mere theories, more satisfying to those who adopt and use them than the rule of thumb too often vainly followed. To millions of thoughtful people throughout the world there has come the realization that it is possible to supplant mere speculation with satisfying truth proved and demonstrable in human experience. With this understanding there will come, now or at some time in the future, an end to the needless waste, in suffering and discouragement, which attends the age-old effort to adapt and readapt discredited theories and false concepts to a standard of human life which is constantly being elevated and illumined by a clearer understanding of man's genesis and dominion.

Editorial Notes

THE fourth publication of the poll of voters being taken by Collier's Weekly shows Henry Ford materially in the lead as a presidential favorite. With 128,276 votes cast, Ford receives 38,467, as against President Harding's 27,170, and McAdoo, third in the list, far behind with 10,526. Ford leads in the home states of Harding, Johnson, Underwood, and La Follette-all presumably "favorite sons." A dispatch to the Chicago Tribune quotes Ford as saying that there will be four tickets in the field-Republican, Democratic, a "third," and the Henry Ford ticket, and that the result will be to throw the election of President into the House of Representatives. The prospect is, to say the least, an interesting one. Even more significant than the personal tribute to a great industrialist is the fact that growing distrust of both of the chief political parties and their leadership is probably a great cause of the turning toward him.

THE notable success of the Austrian loan, which was oversubscribed in the New York market within fifteen minutes, not only offers hope of the beginning of the reconstruction process in Europe, but affords an evidence of the real efficiency of the League of Nations. In no country had the currency reached a more chaotic stage than in Austria, and nowhere was business more moribund. The League stepped in, "pegged" the krone, and stopped further printing of paper money; and, finally, through eight of its principal constituents, guaranteed the loan which has thus been eagerly subscribed. One wonders whether the United States, which is doubtfal about the worth of the League, would have subscribed so liberally if that organization had not been back of Austria.

Child Welfare in Russia

By J. RIVES CHILDS

UNLIKE the measures formulated to promote education, the provisions made by the Soviet Government for the furtherance of child welfare have been directed by the nature of conditions in Russia more to meeting the problems arising from a temporary emergency than those presented of a permanent

It is difficult, therefore, to judge of the Government's accomplishments in this particular field, although some light may be thrown on the general attitude of the Government toward child welfare by a review of the temporary, as well as those few permanent, measures adopted in its behalf.

Like the early plans in behalf of education, initial plans of the Government for child welfare embodied impractical theories which came to be discarded almost as soon as they were broached. According to this early theory, the child was the privileged ward of the state. The obligation of rearing and caring for a child was to pass from the family to the Government. It was even proposed that sufficient children's institu-tions should be established in Russia to relieve in future the family of every responsibility for the care of its offspring. But a plan so contrary to every parental instinct was never put into execution.

What the Government did, however, was to increase very considerably the number and extent of accommodations for such of those children whose families were desirous, for one reason or another, of giving them over into the charge of the state. There was nothing to compel a family to enter its children into the homes established by the Government, and so there were introduced few children, other than orphans, who would not otherwise have been abandoned to the streets by their

In the cities and towns it was the policy of the Government to turn over for use as children's homes and hospitals the most suitable homes and buildings which had been nationalized. In the rural sections, country estates of landowners were largely utilized for this purpose. The most notable example of this was the conversion of the Imperial estate, Tsarskoeya Selo, just outside of Petrograd, into a children's colony, which thereafter became known as Detskoeya Selo, or Children's Village.

Day nurseries were introduced in all the towns and cities to care for the children of such mothers as were busied during the day in occupations outside the home. Later, such nurseries were established, although less extensively, in the rural sections at planting and harvest times, when the Russian peasant women are accustomed to share the labor of field work with the men.

With the enormous numbers of children made homeless and orphans as a result of civil war and famine, there was added to the problem of the Government for executing permanent plans for child welfare that of the administration of temporary relief. Previously established children's homes became quickly overtaxed, so that the constant opening of new ones was made necessary. With the outbreak of famine, it was necessary to remove from the famine area the thousands of children who were congesting the famine-stricken towns and overcrowding the already sadly taxed facilities. A very expeditious system for the evacuation of these children to the more productive areas was organized, and in 1921 to 1922 probably the finest and best equipped trains in Russia were the sanitary trains provided for this purpose.

The Government has consistently, from the beginning of the Revolution to the present time, made the children, if not the privileged wards, then privileged members of the Nation. When all Russia was placed on a ration by the Government, children received a preferential one.

I have visited 300 or more children's institutions in Russia, for the most part in the famine area. Of those which were established before the famine, and which were intended as ent institutions, little that is not commendatory can be said. It is the temporary institution, established to meet the crisis presented by the famine, and which naturally issin the preponderance, which has been taken generally by observers as characteristic of the accomplishments of the Government in the field of child welfare.

But in attempting to reach a just and impartial estimate of any phase of conditions in Russia, at all times a difficult and almost insuperable task, it is necessary to take into account a multitude of circumstances surrounding those conditions. It is to be remembered, so far as concerns child welfare, that however deplorable conditions may be, and often are, in the makeshift children's institutions, established to meet a temporary emergency and under conditions where the personnel is untrained and teachers are ill-equipped, the permanent institutions are extraordinarily well organized, when the trying conditions confronting them are considered.

In Kazan, of which as a city I can best judge, as I was there as district supervisor of the American Relief Administration, the number of children's institutions more than doubled from 1921 to 1922 alone, and at the present time this city of only 156,000 inhabitants contains more than 100 children's homes, housing something more than 10,000 children.

In the closing days of 1922, in a last survey made of these homes, there were some half a dozen which were found to be unsuitable for occupancy on account of their unsanitary condition. In company with a representative of the Department of Education, the writer appeared before the local government of the Tartar Republic in order to make a representation of the conditions which had been discovered and in order to bring about, if possible, their alleviation.

A few days after this interview it was announced that the Government had appropriated out of an already severely strained treasury a sum sufficient to insure the making of all repairs and renovations necessary to convert two of the city's former palaces into children's homes to accommodate those children of the homes which had been found unfit for use.

It was such a spirit as this; of meeting those needs which the welfare of the children demanded and which could reasonably be met, that I found animating a large proportion of the public officials with whom I came in contact in Russia in the course of eighteen months' work for the children with the American Relief.

It became a rule of the Government of the Tartar Republic after the establishment of the American Relief Administration in the Kazan district, that any employee of a children's home would be summarily dismissed upon presentation by the ARA of satisfactory evidence of the employee's incapacity or neglect. of the child welfare work.

It is this spirit, more than the actual conditions one encounters in a study of child welfare during a period of an extraordinary emergency, which makes possible the judgment that the Soviet Government bids fair to accomplish a constructive work in the program being followed in behalf of
